Award winning novelist Terry Kay will be the fourth speaker in the OLLI 20th Anniversary Speakers’ Series. On March 19, at 1:00 p.m. in the Wilson Hall auditorium, the renowned Southern author will speak about some of the dozen novels he has written. His stories illustrate the changes that came to the South from rural electrification through the civil rights movement. Terry Kay builds his characters with warmth and emotion as he weaves poignant stories based on his intimate knowledge of people in his native South.

In preparation for Kay’s appearance, a survey class of his selected fiction, facilitated by Gratia Mahony, is in progress during the OLLI winter term. The Year the Lights Came On, To Dance with the White Dog, The Valley of Light, and The Book of Marie are the titles being studied. The film based on his novel To Dance with the White Dog won an Emmy.

As the author of more than fourteen works of fiction, Kay is a member of the Georgia Writers Hall of Fame and a four-time Author of the Year from the Georgia Writers Association.

Prior to his afternoon lecture, Terry Kay will lead a workshop to share techniques and insights about his writing style. This morning workshop will be held from 10:00 – 11:30 a.m. OLLI members may preregister for the workshop by calling 256.824.6183. Please register early for the workshop as seating is limited.
OLLI at UAH has much to be grateful for as this new year gets underway.

The winter term schedule is offering a wide mix of subject matter and fulfilling the interests of OLLI members every day of the week. The Curriculum Committee is doing its job well. Facilitators are coming to class well prepared and keeping members informed of opportunities outside class.

The 20th Anniversary Speakers’ Series has attracted larger numbers at each event. Membership in OLLI has grown with each gathering. Two classes have also spawned from anniversary speakers Dr. Doug Phillips and Southern author Terry Kay. Bill McAllister is teaching Natural Wonders of Alabama, and Gracia Mahony is teaching selected novels of Terry Kay.

Office volunteers are keeping the office humming as calls are answered and instructors and OLLI members receive needed assistance.

Committees are functioning at a high level. Committees grow in membership as functions are planned and managed.

Member Interest Groups are active and growing. See, for example, the article on the hiking member interest group on p. 3 in this newsletter.

Lastly, our board of directors has an opportunity to expand its knowledge concerning OLLI. We have just learned that the Southern Regional OLLI Conference for 2014 will be held at the University of North Carolina, Asheville, July 30—August 1. These conferences are the very best way to learn about OLLI. Last year, OLLI at UAH was represented at the University of Georgia, Athens, by nine members. We should make it a dozen or more this summer. Make your plans now to go. It’s driving distance, and we’ll have a great time.

Do you remember when you could recognize not only a particular car but also its model with a single glance? Then we have a course for you! The spring class lineup will feature a Classic Cars course taught by members of car clubs in and around Huntsville. Did you know a car was once manufactured in Huntsville?

Or if you want to know why a building stands up or find out more about Galloping Gertie, aka the Tacoma Narrows Bridge, we’ll have a course on the World’s Greatest Structures. If cars and buildings don’t grab your interest, then maybe a course on the Ancient Cultures of South America will.

In the course on Floral Arrangements, students will create arrangements to take home each week. No interest in florals? Then you can learn about and discuss current geo-political events in the Great Decisions course.

Clearly, we have courses for everyone. And the spring term is fast approaching. After our snowy winter, your brain needs a jump-start. We have it here. We anticipate that a number of classes will be sellouts. Just think you can learn something new each week, meet friends and make new acquaintances, and generally have a good time.

OLLI classes are a great way to keep learning about things you’ve always had an interest in, but never had the time to study. Join us during spring term.

It’s a fitness, fun and social activity - the OLLI Hiking MIG!

This group was formed in the fall of 2013 and now has a membership of more than 120! We offer hikes on Thursdays (easier) and Fridays during each OLLI term and sometimes between terms. We have three hike leaders on Thursdays and four on Fridays, which allows us to be quite flexible in having fast-slow hikes or breaking the group up if a lot of hikers show up. You don’t need any fancy equipment or need to be a star athlete to participate!

We hike several areas known and unknown by our members, including Wade Mountain, Land Trust properties, Monte Sano State Park, Keel Mountain, various greenways, Hays Preserve, and Madison County Nature Trail. We find that although hikers have been living in the area for many years, many are not familiar with most of the trails, and they are surprised at what’s out there. We rotate the hikes so that we don’t go to the same places all the time. Hikes vary from easy to hard, and each one is clearly described in a periodic e-mail, including level of difficulty, elevation changes, and length.

You are welcome to become a member. To join, send an e-mail to OLLIHIKING@gmail.com with your name and e-mail address. Membership is free to OLLI members.

OLLI's Cultural Committee has arranged a charter bus tour leaving Huntsville early morning on April 8 and returning the evening of April 10. If you are looking for a bit of culture and a breath of spring, Memphis is the place to find it, and April is the time to do it. Our local “Backbeat” guides will join us daily and give us a true experience of Memphis -- from hot rhythms to springtime blooms and refined art treasures. We'll enjoy the sights and sounds of Beale Street and visiting the Smithsonian’s Rock and Soul Museum among other musical venues. We'll visit three exceptional, fine arts museums -- the Dixon Museum and Gardens, the Belz Museum of Asian and Judaic Art, and Brooks Museum of Art. Optional evening at the Memphis Opera Festival. Space is limited. Contact Nancy Darnell at nbd51@aol.com by March 10.

Thanks for the Memory! Mosaic of Love Concert Well Attended by OLLI Members

That's what we say to the Huntsville Master Chorale who performed "cinemagic" at their Mosaic of Love concert on February 15. OLLI members turned out in numbers for both performances set in the grand salon of the historic Cooper House on Randolph Street. Guests enjoyed popular love songs from the movies at beautiful valentine-themed tables where sumptuous desserts and delicious coffees and teas were served.

But it really was about the MUSIC and the MEMORIES. Who didn't swoon to "When I Fall in Love," "Moon River," and "Some Enchanted Evening"? Who didn't want to dance "Cheek to Cheek" or experience the heart skip a beat hearing "Unchained Melody" or "The Way We Were"?

To quote one thank-you note, "I just loved the Huntsville Master Chorale performance and came home singing 'If Ever I Would Leave You' such that I couldn't get it out of my mind!! Eating sweet delicacies, enjoying good company, experiencing a memory-lane extravaganza makes a fine evening. You are all SO TALENTED."

Teacher Appreciation Lunch

We are lucky to have such great teachers in OLLI. We can show them how much they mean to us at the Winter Teacher Appreciation Lunch on Friday, March 21, at Trinity United Methodist Church on Airport Road from 12:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Come and enjoy a delicious BBQ lunch from Smokey's, and let our teachers know how much they are valued. It is also a great time to socialize with OLLI friends. A small donation will be taken at the door.

OLLI Volunteer “Deliverer” Needed

Ron Brock has assumed the role of delivering the OLLI Insider monthly from the printer to the post office for mailing. He needs a volunteer to substitute when he is unable to deliver it. The requirement is only 1-1/2 hours per month. Please contact Ron at 256.348.5681, if you can assist.

Alaska Tour Update

One of the events on the OLLI Alaska trip June 19 to July 1, 2014, will be a visit with OLLI-Alaska members in Fairbanks. While there, we will also be offered a chance to have a guided tour of a bird preserve.

The Alaska tour is full at this time.

Popcorn and a Movie

We had a very successful movie showing of To Dance with the White Dog, attracting a full house to Room 152 in Wilson Hall. This movie, based on a Terry Kay book by the same title, was chosen to fit in with the course this term, "Novels by Terry Kay, Southern Author," and Kay's visit to OLLI-UAH for the fourth 20th Anniversary Speaker Series on March 19, both as featured speaker and as leader of an author's workshop.
Hints from a Professional Photographer

Eddie Soloway of Santa Fe has graciously agreed to share several hints with our OLLI amateur photographers. Mr. Soloway has a keen passion for nature and is an amazing photographer. He is also a writer and an award winning teacher of photography.

He advises, “change your perspective when photographing nature”: by this, he means to lie down, peer through, look up, look under . . . by changing your physical perspective you can bring freshness to the photograph. Even everyday subjects take on new energy when they are presented from different angles and viewpoints.

There are many ways to make a successful composition. People get confused about how to best compose a photograph. Simplify your thinking about composition by creating a beautiful way for the eye to move through the image. Graceful lines, retreating horizons, a swirling of color can take the eye on a beautiful journey through a photograph. Check to make sure that nothing is getting in the way. Things poking in from the sides, big areas of washed out sky, and a jumble of competing objects can take the eye in other directions.

Hang out with a wow, and it will get better. It can be tempting, especially in great light, to take a picture and run off to the next. He explains that, even though you may have a good photo, wait around. When you find a moment of magic or light that makes you stop, honor it by hanging around and working it.

Distracting backgrounds (move your feet to control what the viewer sees). You are excited about the subject, so excited you forget to look behind it, and there, coming right out of the top of a friend’s head is a telephone pole. The same thing happens in nature all the time, though sometimes in such subtle ways we don’t see a problem until after the fact. A good photographic habit is to move your feet. Remember that you are in charge of how the subject relates to the background, and you do not have to take the photograph from the first place you see it.

Creative backgrounds (surround the subject with beauty). Sometimes the background in a photograph is a much larger area than the subject, and if used well can create the atmosphere for the entire image.

Check your edges (move your eye around all four sides). It can seem like a lot to remember, but so much of the working part of photography becomes intuitive with time. That’s the way it is with moving your eyes around the four edges of the photograph to make sure what is inside is thoughtful, and what is outside stays outside. It is also common for many cameras to capture more of a scene than you can see through the viewfinder.

It was early morning of Labor Day; no other motor vehicles were on the country road I traveled. All was quiet. I like it like that. It reminds me of the roads eighty years ago when I rode with Papa in his Model T Ford.

My world is different now; it has shrunk. My eyes and ears do not hear and see as much as once they did. My circle of friends is smaller. The quiet back roads that I once traveled with Papa are now brimming over with cars, trucks, motorcycles, anything that will run fast and make lots of noise—except during the early morning hours of holidays.

Today, if you want the road to yourself, about thirty minutes after sunrise of a holiday is the only time you’ll get it. Today, I gave it a try.

My black and tan hound gave chase for about a quarter of a mile before surrendering the road to me. After that, for a few miles, the empty road belonged to me. My mind took me back to 1933. Again, it seemed, I was riding a country road with Papa in his Model T.

My reverie was broken by a parade. One does not expect a parade that early on a Labor Day, but there it was. Sixty or seventy on parade and I was the only spectator as they marched, left to right, across the road. Some would say their parade was not well organized, they marched, more or less single-file, in a loosey-goosey manner. I thought it was a beautiful parade.

The leader of the parade came into view when I was forty yards from the intersection; he waddled when he walked. If I did not know better, I might have thought he had been drinking. I stopped my truck in the middle of the road when I came to the line of marchers, killed the motor, and enjoyed the Labor Day parade.

The leader and those who followed waddled slowly across the road in front of me, all doing a goose-step. I guess it was the matriarch that brought up the rear. Her goose-step was rather uncertain, as if she had a sore foot, but she had a presence that suggested she was the boss. For a moment she stopped in the road just a few yards in front of me, turned my way, and squawked. As best my old ears understood, she said:

“’It’s Labor Day. A time to remember the women who worked in the cotton mills twelve hours each day for fifteen cents. A time to remember the twelve year-old boys who worked in the coal mines fourteen hours each day for twelve cents.’”

Her brief refresher in our labor history finished, Mother Goose of the gaggle waddled across the road to join her Canadian family, and I continued down the country road.

A Note From Joe Berry

OLLI friends,
I enjoy writing short pieces on various subjects. Most articles are of historical interest, and I try to make them accurate. Sometimes I stray into fantasy-land and write tongue-in-cheek. If you would like to receive copies of my stories, send me your e-mail address at alabamahoss1@gmail.com, and I will add you to my distribution list.

Thanks, Joe Berry.
“The woods are lovely, dark and deep,” or they will be at nightfall on Monte Sano Mountain. Their loveliness is captured February 12, 2014, in this photo submitted by one of OLLI’s veteran photographers, Bill McAllister. Of course OLLI readers recognize Robert Frost’s line from “Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening.”
